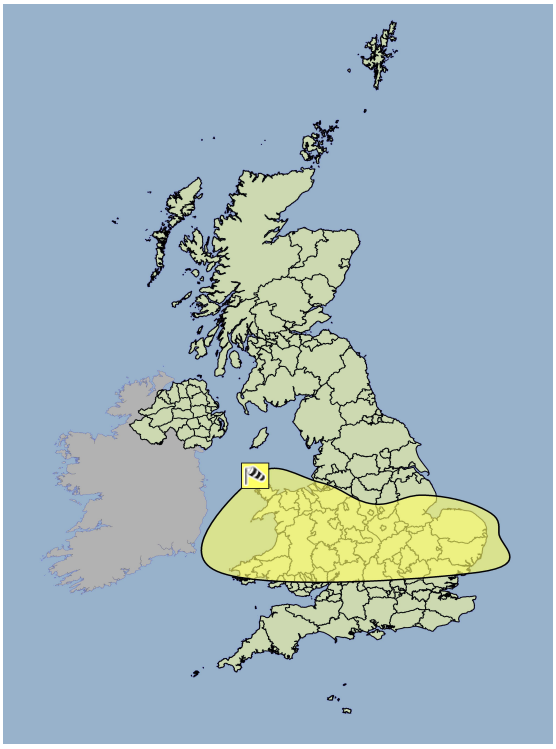
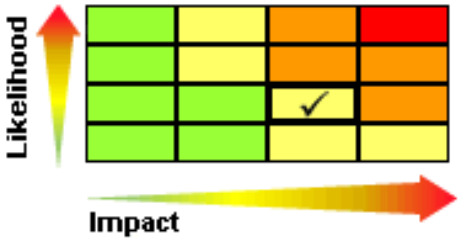
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A vigorous depression will track quickly east across Ireland and then northern England this evening, with a swathe of very strong winds developing on the southern flank of the low. The worst of the winds look likely to reach west Wales in the early evening, sweeping rapidly eastwards across the Midlands and East Anglia later during the evening. This update limits the southern extent of the previous warning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 16:00 on Tue, 17th Nov 2015 until 02:00 on Wed, 18th Nov 2015

West to southwesterly gales and locally severe gales are likely to sweep eastwards across the area on Tuesday evening. Widespread inland lowland gusts of 50-60 mph are likely, with isolated 70 mph. Over exposed hills, coasts and headlands, such as on coasts of west Wales, winds may gusts over 80 mph. Large waves will be an additional hazard along coasts. The winds should quickly ease across western parts later on Tuesday evening and across eastern parts shortly after midnight.

The public should be aware of the risk of disruption to travel and that gusts of this strength could bring down trees and lead to some damage to weakened structures.
